It is hardly necessary to state that the riot yesterday had scoured the Concession to find out if there was any one implicated in the contemplated rising, but they did not aucceed. The French policemen who was to have been the object of the rioters' vengeance left Shaughai some days ago.

We hear from Colombo, says the Singapore Free Press, some interesting details concerbing the steam making qualities of Labran Coal, a quantity of which was taken for trial by the French mail steamer Melbourne, the vessel by which Sir Frederick Weld went home. About the second or third day out Labuan coal was burned and it was observed that the revolutions of the engine dropped four per minute under the number given by Welsh coal. On the following day coulburned in the proportions of one-third Labran and two-thirds Cardiff. This gave a better result. During the following days Labuan coal and Cardiff coal was burned in the proportion of half-and half, and the same number of revolutions were obtained per minute as that obtained by burning Cardiff coal entirely. The increase in consumption produced by burning half-and-half Labuan and Cardiff was be-

Capt. Vimont of the Mclbourns declares that he is much pleased with the result. The success of this experiment should serve to encourage the more general use of Labuan coal in combination with Cardiff. of Kiukiang to go into the sea-producing districts of Wuning and Ningohow, with the intention of examining the tea-growth, cultivation, picking and manufacture of the plant. On reaching Wuning they verified the passports and proceeded into the monntains. The journey, however, was not pleasant, as all slong the route crowds of of men, women and children followed and made fun of the party. Following the advice of the compradores the Russians donned the native coatume and continued their course for Ningchow. This did not do them much good, as the tes pickers 'An among the mountains beard of the foreigners' conling and abandoned their work expressly with hope of catching a night of the strangers. To put a stop to the many annoying questions the Chinese-dressed Russians told the mountaineers that they were natives of Canton and that the forand delay was avoided. Mrs Potter's Juliei has won high encomiums wherever she has performed the part. It is by no means an easy part, even amongst the heroines of Shakespeare. Juliet's virginal freshness and ingennousness in the earlier Col. Sergt. Mack .. scenes, the awakening of the transforming passion of first love, the sudden transition from the naivete and coyness of us sophisticated girlhood to flie deep and powerful emolious of womanhood dominated and glorified by an all-sacrificing love; the unquestioning, unwavering faith with which the heroine follows wherever love leads, although it is by a road whose terrors might appal the bravest to faithfully pourtray all this in natural sequence requires rare powers and peculiar gifts. Such gifts nature has bestowed on Mrs Potter with a generous hand; and along with these she brings to the interpretation of the character of the hapless Juliet a pure and intense womanly sympathy, keen intelligence, high artistic insuncts, and a cultured appreciation of the beauty of Shakespoaro's limes. A commonplace physiognomy can never by any process of elaborate make-up he the face of one's ideal Juliet; but Mrs Potter needs no aid from art in this respect, for she has only to be herself to realise all that the imagination looks for of sweetness and tenderness and warmth of passion in the fair young daughter of the Capulets. In the balcony scene, which was the opening one on Saturday night, Mrs Potter made an immediate and complete conquest of her audience. Every accent and gesture expressive of her varying moods seemed natural and graceful. Juliet's innocent confession of love; and her assumption of alarm when she finds that Romeo has overheard her, were admirably depicted; and one could see, as the scene progressed, the. light of the newborn passion shining tremulously through the thin veils of maidenly archness and reserve, until at longth it came out olear and, radiant in the words :-

BRITISH POLITICS. London, April, 24.—There is much congratulation among members of the Comnions that the Conservatives have committed theniselves to free education, but much diversity of opinion as to how the now departure would affect the party's future. No one doubts that the Government has made the comp with a view to a general

Conservatives who dislike the measure accept it because of their desire to associate the name of the party with an immense boon to town workingmen and rural laborers, but the Liberals reason that Tory action cannot take from them the credit of the measure for which they have long

The opposition has further and stronger ressons to hail the Government scheme, containing, as it does, abundant possibilities for party disruption and widespread national discontent. There will probably be denominational trouble, etc. According to high authority the Cabinet plans, however, simply involve full education in lower standards, assisted education I understand that Admiral Ting at Wei- in higher standards, and increased grants to denominational schools. No change is to be made in the system of control, except that parents shall have power to elect part of the board. The solid opposition of the Liberals on the latter point may give the Conservatives a disastrous check on the eve of the dissolution.

The Foreign Office has received alarme ing advice from Lisbon. The English Minister at Glynn-Petric, represents the political situation as critical. The Portuguese Cabinet ought to submit the new English convention to the Cortes on May 5th, but the Premier pleads for an extension of the modus vivendi and delay in the nublishing of the convention, in order to give time for the soutement of the excitement against England, which is imperiling: the position of the Government.
